ART IN THE CHURCHES.

What an Artist Who Is Also an Episcopal Clergymen Thinks Religion Needs.

The Leautiful decorations of St. John's Episcops church, in this city, have been a source of much interest to religious people of that and culture in Washington. Although in many of the Episcopal churchus there is more or less elaboration of artistic display, none, however, equal this sanctuary listic display, none, however, equal this sanctuary in its teachings of modern ecclesiastical art. That there is a growing demand for an improved method of ecclesiastical art will be plainly undersioned by the views expressed to a REPULLIAN reporter by Rev. Johannes A. Oertel, a clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal church, an arist of rare merit, who is a leading authority in masters of church paintings and designing. Ho was seen in his studiolacity, and was asked to express his ideas upon the progress of modern church decoration. Said he:

in matters of church paintings and designing. He was seen in his studio is elly, and was asked to express his ideas upon the progress of modern church decoration. Said he:

"I cannot undertake to say in few words what would fill volumes, but I will try to say something in a manner that may be found antisentory. How to commence, pursues me, unused body say that the present skile of ornamentation and siencil work should be condemned. There is nothing in either of these uses to instruct; nothing to apply religious teachings to the people and children; nothing deep enough to awaken thought in the cultured. What is wanted is an art that is most thoroughly pronounced in its religious character. I cannot talk now of this art in Europe, and its successive sieps through ages in that civilizazation; I will only speak of it in this great country. Trinity church, New York, started the adoption of Gotha a chilecture thirty-seven years ago. This, then, was the foundation of ecclesia-tical art in Auerica. From the Gothe, architects had to go to other styles, as more was demanded of them. They became silve to the lact that churches must have arrangements according to symbolism. Something had to be done to satisfy the want then felt, so there arose a class of church decorators like Lamb and Gotsler, or New York. They satisfied in an artistic sense, and to this there has grown, from year to year, not only in quantity, but in quality, sheer arisitic work, the demand the necessity for which is greater now than it was ten years ago. With these came decorators of the walls, the polychrone workers. This last to our day, but is found to be un-attalactory. People are getting thread of the siready, recognizing the fact that it teaches nothing, but leaves the mind empty, while it cous much money. The same amount expended on thoughtful art would give what is at once lasting and beneficial. Artists have been cauled upon in a few instances to the service of the church but here is a said that every artist paints a Christ such as He himself c

The members of the National Rifles, of which body Mr. Magruder is a sergeant, attended in large numbers. At the hour mamed the bridal party entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March. The ushers, Messrs. Will P. Boteler, Frank E. Johnson, James F. Rule, and W. H. Kencaster, all of the Natidnal Rifles, preceded the party. Misses Hattle Wasson and Madge Knapp, two little misses attred in tarletan and carrying floral baskets, and the bridamaids, Miss Mollie De Saul, a sizer of the bride, and Miss Corinne Barion, were followed by the bride and groom. The bride was attred in white satin, with a corsage boquet of orange blossoms and diamond ornaments, while the brides maids were white cashmere, with corsage boquets. Rev. Dr. Ward per ormed the ceremony. A reception, to which the initimate friends of the family were invited, was held at the residence of the bride's ather, on New Jersey avenue southeast. Mr. and Mrs. Magruder will leave for a tour north this morning. Among the handsome p. esents was one from the Rifles, of a silver service. attended in large numbers. At the hour named

To the Students of Howard University Yesterday.

Yesterday, at noon. Mr. Douglass, by special in-vitation, addressed the students of Howard uni-versity. He was introduced by Tutor G. W. Cook. of the normal department, in a brief, but pertinent and highly complimentary speech. After the singing of the authem, "Praise Ye the Lord," by the choral band of the institution, Mr. Douglass was received with enthusiastic applause when he was received with enthusiastic applause when he proceeded to discourse upon "The composite character of the American nation and its destiny." He argued with unusual logic and philosophy for the ultimate and highest development of our nation, by reason of its conglumerate life, made up from all nationalities, showing that white England has been developed into strong nationalife by the mixture of races, Celife, Norman, Teutonic, and Latin, so this nation would grow into greatness by such an admixture of races, not the less by the African and Uninese—whose cause he espoused—than by the Saxon and other foreign elements. His plea was for the universal brotherhood of man under the fatherbood of God. The address sparkled with wit and humor, while at the same time it displayed solid speculation and philosophy.
